

PRIVACY POLICY

URSU respects the privacy of all users of this website and is committed to protect all the personal information shared. Some of the sections of the website may be accessed without the input of personal information.

However, when this personal information is required and gathered with sale purpose, or when the user decides to submit such information, the handling of such information will be done accordingly to the Law of Data Protection — Law 67/98 from 26th October, Law of Data Protection — so that the confidentiality and security of the data submitted is guaranteed.

In addition, we inform the users that the information submitted will be forwarded to third parties, being these, exclusively, delivery companies having the responsibility of delivering the goods to the user, provider of the personal information submitted.

The submission of the personal information is optional and will always be granted access to the user for correction or annulment of any information provided, being this right granted personally or in writing, directly to the address displayed in the homepage.

